Leader Conversation Guide: My Church - Freedom on the Journey

Main Idea

Freedom is one of the greatest promises of the gospel, but it's not a one-time event, it's a lifelong journey. In John 8, Jesus reminds us that true freedom is only found in Him: "If the Son sets you free, you will be free indeed." This freedom goes deeper than circumstances; it touches our body, soul, and spirit. Along the way, God gives us gifts: Victory over sin, healing from wounds, and authority over the enemy. These gifts enable us to walk in His purpose. This week's message reminded us that freedom is not about striving in our own strength but learning to trust God's process. He saves us by grace, He works in us by His Spirit, and He calls us to live in right relationship with Him and others. The key is not concealing our struggles but bringing them into the light, where forgiveness, healing, and strength are found. As we begin our discussion, let's open our hearts to the freedom Christ offers. May we learn to walk this journey together, anchored in His truth, confident in His promises, and surrendered to His Spirit.

So if the Son sets you free, you will be free indeed.

JOHN 8:36

Make it Practical:

True freedom is only found in Jesus.

- We are not called to be consumers of religion but disciples who follow His teaching. Jesus sets us free from sin and makes us sons and daughters in God's family.
- John 8:31–36

Freedom is a journey of transformation.

- God saves us by grace, and He continues to work in us through His Spirit. As we walk with Him, we discover our purpose and live out our faith with confidence and reverence.
- Ephesians 1:16–18; Philippians 2:12–13

Freedom grows through God's gifts and right relationships.

- Along the way, God gives us victory over sin, healing from wounds, and authority over the enemy. Freedom deepens as we bring our struggles into the light and walk in community.
- Romans 7:21–25; James 5:16
